

What We Learned From a Snapshot of the Five Year Olds In Our Community

Our children are generally doing WELL, as evidenced by these overall early developmental results showing the percentage of children having adequate skills in these five areas:

81%

Communication skills & general knowledge

81%

Emotional maturity

87%

Physical health & well-being

86%

Social competence

88%

Language & thinking skills

However, that also means about

1 in 5 children

in St. Albert are struggling with playing with others, exploring the world around them, talking about how they feel, and having compassion for others.

The First 2000 Days of Life Strongly Impact a Child's Future

Early Child Development Matters

- It sets the course for a child's future;
- It strongly influences success in school and work, mental and physical health; productivity, behavior, relationships and overall well-being;
- It lays the foundation for all later development and provides a unique opportunity for getting children off to the right start for a good future;
- Its benefits are far more reaching, from healthier, happier, more successful individuals to more stable and prosperous societies.

Early Development Results Vary Significantly Between Communities Across the Region, Province and Country

- The early development results raise questions about why the differences;
- Our challenge is to identify possible explanations and actions in response to results.

Early Child Development Is Everybody's Business

Children grow up in an environment of relationships – family, community and the wider society are all part of the environment that plays a role in helping children to thrive and succeed.

The Coalitions in St. Albert and Sturgeon Region are busy gathering input from stakeholders about how to strengthen early childhood development opportunities and sharing findings from the Early Child Development Mapping Project (ECMap).
